Places to explore in Eid Holidays

Shah Foladi – Bamyan

Located in the Hindu Kush, one of Afghanistan's most beautiful and fascinating landscapes, the Shah Foladi Valley spans over 700 km². A stunning, less-visited part of the Koh-e-Baba mountains. It's perfect for hiking, snow trekking, and nature photography. In winter, it turns into a snowy wonderland, while summer offers lush green valleys.

The Darunta Dam – Jalalabad

The Darunta Dam is located on the Kabul River near the village of Darunta, approximately 7 km west of Jalalabad, the capital of Nangarhar Province in eastern Afghanistan. It is a wonderful place for sightseeing as it has local food, transportation and river sight for relaxation.

Dasht -e-Abdan – Kunduz

Dasht-e-Abdan, also known as Dasht-i-Abdan, is a desert located in Kunduz province of Afghanistan. The desert is renowned for its unique beauty, especially during the spring season when it becomes lush and green for a brief period of one to three weeks. In recent years, Dasht-e-Abdan has attracted numerous visitors, particularly during the spring months, who come to witness its ephemeral greenery and experience its serene environment.

Gulghundi Hill – Parwan

Gulghundi Hill, which is one of the spring promenades in Afghanistan, located in Charikar city, the capital of Parwan province. Gulghundi Hill is also known as Purple Hill which is host for thousands of visitors from various provinces in the spring season.

How is Eid al-Fitr celebrated around the world?

Eid is a time of celebration after accomplishing one of the most important religious duties: fasting during the month of Ramadan. Lots of people celebrate this by spending time exchanging gifts and visiting friends and family. The first of day Eid starts with prayer and a big meal is usually the main event. A lot of people are seen hugging in the street as part of Eid celebrations. The whole idea is that whoever you meet, you try and create a feeling of good will. Any feeling of animosity is put aside, at least for one day!

While there are lots of things that everyone will do at Eid, with approximately 2 billion Muslims across the globe, it's not surprising that people can have some different ways of celebrating this holy festival.

Sweet treats and other foodstuffs

Eid al-Fitr is sometimes referred to as the Sugar Feast, a nod to the fact that a large constituent part of the meal one eats at this festival is desserts. But different countries around the world have different favorites:

Turkey

Classic Turkish sweets such as Baklava and Turkish delight are given to friends, family and neighbors as a present during Eid, or Seker Bayrami as it's commonly known in the country.

Iraq and Saudi Arabia

The eating of dates is a very important part of both Ramadan and Eid, as they are a popular snack eaten at the pre-dawn meal before the fast (called the Suhoor). In these two countries though, they are of particular significance – lots of people will bake Kleichas, which are rose-flavoured biscuits that contain a filling of nuts and dates. Both Iraq and Saudi Arabia consider them to be their national cookie.

Yemen

Bint al sahn is the preferred Yemeni sweet. In English it's sometimes called honey cake, and is topped with nigella seeds.

As in Russia, Manti is a popular thing to eat at Eid. They're usually stuffed with some sort of seasoned meat. In Bangladesh, Korma is traditionally eaten, as well as various savory pittas that are shared with family and friends.

Happy Eid!

During Eid, one of the most common things you'll hear people say to one another is "Eid Mubarak!" This literally means "blessed Eid" and is a way of expressing celebration.

Other countries have different greetings though. In Nigeria, people are likely to say "Balla da Sallah", which is like happy Eid. In Malaysia, Eid is called Hari Raya, so to wish someone a happy Eid, you would say "Selamat Hari Raya".

Other traditions

There are some constituent parts of Eid al-Fitr that are recognized all over the world. For example, one of the five pillars of Islam is giving to charity, or Zakat. At Eid, there is a specific type of charitable giving called Zakat al-Fitr, which can take place at the end of Ramadan.

As well as the universal traditions, there are some more quirky ones in different countries. One of these is in Afghanistan, where a popular Eid activity is to paint hard-boiled eggs and have a food fight with them, in what is known as Tokhm-Jangi. Everyone gets involved, and the aim is to break your opponent's egg while keeping yours intact.

Financial and Social Support Initiative at the Office of Registrar

The Office of Registrar has implemented a structured initiative aimed at fostering mutual financial support among its employees. This program is designed to facilitate collective financial cooperation, enabling staff members to assist one another in managing a portion of their financial obligations.

As part of this initiative, employees contribute a predetermined amount from their monthly salaries. Subsequently, in the presence of all participants, a transparent lottery process is conducted, through which one employee is selected to receive the accumulated funds. Once an individual has been selected as a recipient, they will continue to participate in all subsequent phases of the program; however, they will no longer be eligible for future lottery draws until the program concludes.

Beyond its financial benefits, this initiative plays a crucial role in fostering a culture of camaraderie, mutual support, and professional solidarity within the workplace. By cultivating such a positive and collaborative environment, the program enhances employee motivation, contributes to the achievement of institutional goals and promotes the advancement of academic excellence.

The Office of Registrar remains committed to fostering a supportive and engaging work environment. Other offices and departments are encouraged to adopt similar initiatives to strengthen teamwork, enhance workplace morale, and promote a culture of shared responsibility among their staff members.

Birthday Parties

The HR department at Kardan University is thrilled to celebrate the collective birthdays of our staff and faculty members. This joyous occasion serves as a testament to the vibrant community we have cultivated within our institution. This celebration reflects our gratitude for the dedication and hard work exhibited by our staff. May this birthday gathering be filled with laughter, camaraderie, and fond memories as we honor and appreciate the wonderful individuals who play an integral role in the success of Kardan University.
